

National Strategy Information Center

The National Strategy Information Center was founded in 1962 with the goal of advancing the objectives of democracy and enforcing the rule of law abroad in order to maintain United States security. By identifying problems, analyzing possible solutions, and implementing projects, the NSIC seeks to further support the standards of security policy.

Partnership between other organizations and a wide range of educational programs to advocate for the rule of law and security initiatives are vital for the NSIC to promote their goals and advance their research. The development of independent programs that have been established with the help of the NSIC is the ultimate goal of its organization so that it can use its policy research in substantial and meaningful ways.
